Patent no.:

ETSI Deliverable:	GSM 03.19 (TS 101 476)
Notes:	The IPR declarations related to GSM 03.19 (TS 101 476) from Sun Microsystems Inc. have been removed from the ETSI IPR online database at the request of Directorate General Competition of the European Commission. DG Competition's argument for such a removal, based on evidence they have gathered, is that the presence of these IPR declarations in the IPR online database and SR 000 314 amounts to a measurable distortion of competition in the relevant market. ETSI recognises DG Competition as the competent body to assess distortion of competition in the EU market. Consequently, ETSI considers itself to be under an obligation to take this action in this exceptional case. The removal of these declarations from the ETSI IPR online database and SR 000 314 must not be taken to imply any judgement by ETSI on the essentiality of the relevant IPR. DG Competition has confirmed that this removal is without prejudice to SUN Microsystems Inc.'s right to enforce their relevant patents. NOTE: SUN Microsystems Inc. still maintains their declarations of 19 January 2001 with respect to GSM 03.19 (TS 101 476) and their willingness to comply with the ETSI IPR Policy. These original licensing declarations are available on request from the ETSI Legal Advisor. It should be noted that Sun Microsystems Inc. in their letter of 26 February 2003 to ETSI expressed their continuing belief that they "own patents that might be infringed by every compliant implementation of GSM 03.19 (TS 101 476)". The technical evidence as provided by DG Competition which challenges the essential nature of SUN Microsystems Inc.'s patents is also available on request from the ETSI Legal Advisor.

Notes:	SUN MICROSYSTEMS' STATEMENT OF JANUARY 2003: In accordance with the ETSI IPR Policy, article 4.1, the SIGNATORY hereby informs ETSI that, with reference to ETSI Standard No. GSM 03.19 (ETSI TS 101 476), SUN hereby declares its belief that the patent identified above is in its view ESSENTIAL to implementations of which it is aware, in respect of the GSM 03.19 Specification. Each patent listed above was issued subsequent to SUN's submission of its Declaration to ETSI dated January 19, 2001. Like the patents listed in SUN's Declaration of January 19, 2001, each patent listed above claims the benefit of either PCT Application No. PCT/NL95/00055 or PCT Application No. PCT/NL96/00311, or both. SUN further declares that it has granted, and is prepared to continue to grant, licenses under its ESSENTIAL IPR, including the patents identified above, on fair, reasonable and non-discriminatory terms and conditions. In making this latter declaration, SUN relies on its continuing belief, also stated in prior declarations to ETSI, that Sun's standard license terms and conditions, as reflected in agreements that SUN has previously entered into with SIM card manufacturers, satisfy this standard. SUN MICROSYSTEMS' STATEMENT OF 11 APRIL 2003: The initial reference to GSM 03.19 of SUN MICROSYSTEMS' above statement should be read as referring to GSM 43.019 (TS 143 019).

Like the patents listed in SUN's Declaration of January 19, 2001, each patent listed above claims the benefit of either PCT Application No. PCT/NL95/00055 or PCT Application No. PCT/NL96/00311, or both. SUN further declares that it has granted, and is prepared to continue to grant, licenses under its ESSENTIAL IPR, including the patents identified above, on fair, reasonable and non-discriminatory terms and conditions. In making this latter declaration, SUN relies on its continuing belief, also stated in prior declarations to ETSI, that Sun's standard license terms and conditions, as reflected in agreements that SUN has previously entered into with SIM card manufacturers, satisfy this standard. SUN MICROSYSTEMS' STATEMENT OF 11 APRIL 2003: The initial reference to GSM 03.19 of SUN MICROSYSTEMS'above statement should be read as referring to GSM 43.019 (TS 143 019).

Application no.:	PCT/NL/95/00055 - 94200236.1
Patent no.:	666 550
Countries applicable:	DE, FR, GB, IT, NL
ETSI Deliverable:	TS 102 241
Notes:	In accordance with the ETSI IPR Policy, article 4.1, the SIGNATORY hereby informs ETSI that, with reference to UICC TS 102 241 Specification, SUN hereby declares its belief that the patent identified above might be considered ESSENTIAL in respect of the UICC TS 102 241 Specification. SUN further declares that it has granted, and is prepared to continue to grant, licenses under its ESSENTIAL IPR, including the above mentioned patent, on fair, reasonable and non-discriminatory terms and conditions. In making this latter declaration, SUN relies on its continuing belief, also stated in prior declarations to ETSI, that Sun's standard license terms and conditions, as reflected in agreements that SUN has previously entered into with SIM card manufacturers, satisfy this standard.
